Base Metal Related News

Base Metals fell in the early trade amid continued uncertainty about the sealing of a trade deal between the top two economies.

Trump agreed over progress of completing an initial trade deal with China "soon," but offered no new details on negotiations.

Trump also said that he would raise tariffs on Chinese goods "very substantially" if China does not make a deal with the US, adding that "that's going to be true for other countries that mistreat us too".

China's imports of nickel ore increased 48.84% from a month ago to stand at $8.92\ \text{million}$ mt in September.

China produced a total of 783,000 mt of copper cathode last month, up 3.12% from a month ago and 8.66% from a year ago bolstered by the rampup of newly-commissioned or reopened capacity.

Shanghai copper cathode premiums continued to soften in the week ended Tuesday as a result of low buying interest and a poor import arbitrage.

Base Metal Outlook

Base metals are trading lower in international markets. We expect base metal prices to trade negative on concerns that China-US trade talks are not progressing as expected and after Trump said failing to sign the deal will lead to substantial rise in tariffs. One can maintain sell on rise in Aluminium and buy on dips in Nickel for the day.
