Base Metal Related News

Base metal prices rise as China announced rate cuts to cushion the economic fallout of the coronavirus pandemic.

Asian share markets gripped on expectations a busy week of corporate earnings reports and economic data will drive home the damage done by the global virus lockdown, while U.S. crude prices took an early spill.

The gradual recovery of overseas automakers will lift zinc consumption, but demand may not rise significantly as end-users have not shown signs of returning.

China's economy shrank 6.8% in the first quarter from a year earlier, the first contraction since at least 1992.

Dwindling nickel ore supply from the Philippines amid measures to contain the new coronavirus has boosted nickel prices in China despite weak demand from the stainless steel sector.

Collapsing demand for zinc will swamp supply cuts from major producers Peru and India this year and leave the market with a massive surplus .

Base Metal Outlook

Base metals are trading higher in international markets. We expect base metal prices to trade sideways to negative after China posted negative growth and as investors regained some appetite for risk following news about President Donald Trump's plan to reopen the economy. One can maintain sell on rise in Metals for the day. There are no economic releases in the evening session.
