Precious Metals News

Gold prices eases as risk appetite improved after positive trial results of an experimental COVID-19 treatment while the U.S. Federal Reserve's vow to support the battered economy underpinned the safe-haven metal.

Asian equity markets were poised to gain, tracking Wall Street's rally after positive trial results of an experimental COVID-19 treatment, Fed's pledge to shore up the economy and a jump in oil prices.

The dollar nursed losses after the Fed left the door open to more monetary easing and dampened expectations for a quick economic recovery

The Fed left its kept interest rates near zero and repeated a vow to use its "full range of tools" to shore up the economy

The Bank of England faces the nearly impossible task of putting numbers on the scale of the coronavirus recession next week, when it must also decide whether to expand its already huge 645 bln pound bond-buying programme.

The U.S. economy contracted in the Q1 at its sharpest pace since the Great Recession while economists expect a sharper contraction in GDP in Q2

Precious Metal Outlook

Precious metals are trading higher in the morning trade. We expect prices to trade rangebound as prices are stuck in direction as Fed sees considerable risks to the economy leaving the interest rates unchanged and states that it continue to support the economy with measures. Therefore, one can follow buy on dips strategy in Gold for the day
