Base Metal Related News

Base metal prices weak after a sell-off across US equities and weaker than expected Chinese data put a block on any upward price momentum.

U.S. President Donald Trump ordered an end to Hong Kong's special status, dampening the tensions with China even further and raising the risk of economic retaliation between the world's two biggest economies.

China's exports of unwrought aluminium and aluminium products declined by 30% year on year in June, while total exports for the first six months of 2020 fell by 20.6%

Workers at Antofagasta's Zaldivar and Centinela copper mines in Chile have successively voted to take industrial action after the negotiations for labor contract renewals failed.

The US dollar index, which tracks the greenback against a basket of its peers, touched a new nearly five-week trough of 96.010

Asian markets appeared set to shake off heightened tensions between the United States and China and the spread of the coronavirus, with stock futures pointing to early gains.

Base Metal Outlook

Base metals are trading mixed today. We expect prices to trade sideways to negative as some profit taking on heightened tension between US and China and after Trump signed an order to end the special status from HongKong. China has strongly criticised the move, vowing to take retaliatory action.
